

SHR

His panegyric is made up of half a dozen shreds, like a schoolboy's theme, beaten general topics. Swift.
A beggar might patch up a garment with such shreds as the world throws away. Pope.
2. A fragment.
They said they were an hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs,
That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat:
And with these shreds they vented their complainings. Shak.
Shreds of wit and sentence's rhimes
Blunder'd out a thousand times. Swift.
SHREW. n. f. [sebrzen, German, to clamour.] A peevish, malignant, clamorous, spiteful, vexatious, turbulent woman. [It appears in Robert of Gloucester, that this word signified anciently any one perverse or obstinate of either sex.]
There dede of hem vor hunger a thousand and mo,
And yat nolde the shrewen to none pes go. Robert of Gloucester.
Be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews both short and tall. Shak. H. IV.
By this reckoning he is more shrew than she. Shakespeare.
A man had got a shrew to his wife, and there could be no quiet in the house for her. L'Estrange.
Her fallow cheeks her envious mind did shew,
And ev'ry feature spoke aloud the shrew. Dryden.
Every one of them, who is a shrew in domestic life, is now become a scold in politics. Addis. Freeholder.
SHREW'D. adj. [Contracted from shrewd.]
1. Having the qualities of a shrew; malicious; troublesome; mischievous.
Her eldest sister is so curst and shrewd,
That till the father rids his hands of her,
Your love must live a maid. Shakespeare.
2. Maliciously; cunningly; more artful than good.
It was a shrewd saying of the old monk, that two kind of prisons would serve for all offenders, an inquisition and a bedlam: if any man should deny the being of a God, and the immortality of the soul, such a one should be put into the first, as being a desperate heretic; but if any man should profess to believe these things, and yet allow himself in any known wickedness, such a one should be put into bedlam. Tillotson.
A spiteful saying gratifies so many little passions, that it meets with a good reception; and the man who utters it is looked upon as a shrewd satirist. Addison.
Corruption proceeds from employing those who have the character of shrewd worldly men, instead of such as have had a liberal education, and trained up in virtue. Addison.
3. Bad; ill-betokening.
Scarce any man passes to a liking of sin in others, but by first practising it himself; and consequently we may take it for a shrewd indication, and sign, whereby to judge of those who have sinned with too much caution, to suffer the world to charge sins directly upon their conversation. South's Sermon.
4. Painful; pinching; dangerous; mischievous.
Every of this number,
That have endur'd shrewd nights and days with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune. Shakespeare.
When a man thinks he has a servant, he finds a traitor that eats his bread, and is readier to do him a mischief, and a shrewd turn, than an open adversary. South's Sermon.
No enemy is so despicable but he may do a body a shrewd turn. L'Estrange.
SHREW'DLY. adv. [from shrewd.]
1. Mischievously; destructively.
This practice hath most shrewdly past upon thee. Shakespeare.
At Oxford, his youth and want of experience in maritime service, had somewhat been shrewdly touched, even before the sluices of popular liberty were set open. Wotton.
2. Vexatiously. It is used commonly of slight mischief, or in ironical expression.
The obstinate and schismatical are like to think themselves shrewdly hurt, forsooth, by being cut off from that body which they choose not to be of. South's Sermon.
This last allusion rubb'd upon the fore;
Yet seem'd the not to winch, tho' shrewdly pain'd. Dryden.
3. With strong suspicion.
Four per cent. encreases not the number of lenders; as any man at first hearing will shrewdly suspect it. Locke.
SHREW'DNESS. n. f. [from shrewd.]
1. Sly cunning; archness.
Her garboiles, which not wanted shrewdness of policy too, did you too much disquiet. Shakespeare.
The neighbours round admire his shrewdness,
For songs of loyalty and lewdness. Swift.
2. Mischievousness; petulance.
SHREW'ISH. adj. [from shrew.] Having the qualities of a shrew; froward; petulantly clamorous.
Angelo, you must excuse us;
My wife is shrewish when I keep not hours. Shakespeare.
SHREW'ISHLY. adv. [from shrewish.] Petulantly; peevishly; clamorously; frowardly.
He speaks very shrewishly; one would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him. Shakespeare.

SHR

SHREW'ISHNESS. n. f. [from shrewish.] The qualities of a shrew; frowardness; petulance; clamorousness.
I have no gift in shrewishness,
I am a right maid for my cowardice;
Let her not strike me. Shakespeare.
SHREW'MOUSE. n. f. [sebrzen, Saxon.] A mouse of which the bite is generally supposed venomous, and to which vulgar tradition assigns such malignity, that she is said to lame the foot over which she runs. I am informed that all these reports are calumnious, and that her feet and teeth are equally harmless with those of any other little mouse. Our ancestors however looked on her with such terror, that they are supposed to have given her name to a scolding woman, whom for her venom they call a shrew.
To SHRIEK. v. n. [shrieger, Danish; sericciare, Italian.] To cry out inarticulately with anguish or horror; to scream.
On top whereof ay dwelt the ghastly owl,
Shrieking his baleful note. Fa. Queen.
It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal belman
Which gives the sternest good-night.
Were I the ghost that walk'd,
I'd shriek, that even your ears should rift to hear me. Shak.
In a dreadful dream
I saw my lord to near destruction,
Then shriek'd myself awake. Denham.
Hark! Peace!
At this she shriek'd aloud; the mournful train
Echo'd her grief. Dryden's Knight's Tale.
Why did you shriek out?
SHRIEK. n. f. [serieg, Danish; sericcie, Italian.] An inarticulate cry of anguish or horror.
Una heaving evermore
His useful shrieks and groanings, often tore
Her guiltless garments, and her golden hair,
For pity of his pain. Fa. Queen.
Time has been my senses wou'd have cool'd,
To hear a night shriek, and my fell of hair
Wou'd at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
The corps of Almon, and the rest are shown,
Shrieks, clamours, murmurs, fill the frighted town. Dryd.
SHRIFF. n. f. [schir, Saxon.] Confession made to a priest.
A word out of use.
Off with
Bernardine's head: I will give a present shriff,
And will advise him for a better place. Shakespeare.
My lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame, and talk him out:
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shriff. Shakespeare.
The duke's commands were absolute,
Therefore my lord, address you to your shriff,
And be yourself; for you must die this instant. Rous.
SHRIGHT, for shrieked. Spenser.
SHRILL. [A word supposed to be made per onomatopoeiam, in imitation of the thing expressed, which indeed it images very happily.] Sounding with a piercing, tremulous, or vibratory sound.
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth. Shakespeare.
I have heard
The cock that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill founding throat
Awake the god of day. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
Have I fall'n,
From the dread summit of this chalky bourn!
Look up a height, the shrill gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard. Shakespeare's K. Lear.
Upstarts the lark,
Shrill voice'd and loud, the messenger of morn. Thomson.
To SHRILL. v. n. [from the adjective.] To pierce the ear with sharp and quick vibrations of sound.
The fun of all the world is dim and dark;
O heavy herse,
Break we our pipes that shrill'd as loud as larks,
O careful verse. Spenser.
Hark how the minstrels 'gin to shrill aloud
Their merry music that rebounds from far,
The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling crowd
That well agree withouten breach or jar.
A shrilling trumpet sounded from on high,
And unto battle bade themselves address. Shakespeare.
Here, no clarion's shrilling note
The muse's green retreat can pierce;
The grove, from noisy camps remote,
Is only vocal with my verse. Fenton's Ode to Lord Gower.
The females round,
Maids, wives, and matrons mix a shrilling sound. Pope.
SHRILLY. adv. [from shrill.] With a shrill noise.
SHRILLNESS. n. f. [from shrill.] The quality of being shrill.
SHRIMP.

SHR

Hawks and gulls can at a great height see mice on the earth, and shrumps in the waters. Derham.
2. A little wrinkled man; a dwarf. In contempt.
It cannot be, this weak and writhled shrump
Should strike such terror in his enemies. Shakespeare.
He hath found,
Within the ground,
At last, no shrump,
Whereon to imp
His jolly club. Ben. Jonson.
SHRINE. n. f. [scin, Saxon; serinum, Latin.] A case in which something sacred is deposited.
You living powers enclos'd in stately shrines
Of growing trees; and with rural gods that wield
Your scepters here, if to your cares divine
A voice may come, which troubled soul doth yield, Sidney.
All the world come
To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing faint. Shakespeare.
Come offer at my shrine and I will help thee. Shakespeare.
They often plac'd
Within his sanctu'ry itself their shrines,
Abominations! and with cursed things
His holy rites profan'd. Milton.
Falling on his knees before her shrines,
He thus implor'd her pow'r. Dryden.
Lovers are in rapture at the name of their fair idol; they lavish out all their incense upon that shrine, and cannot bear the thought of admitting a blemish therein. Watts.
To SHRINK. v. n. preterite, I shrunk, or shrank; participle, shrunk. [scrinan, Saxon.]
1. To contract itself into less room; to shrivel; to be drawn together by some internal power.

A kingdom for it was too small a bound;
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough. Shakespeare.
2. To withdraw as from danger.
The noise encreases,
She comes, and feeble nature now I find
Shrinks back in danger, and forsakes my mind. Dryden.
Am I become so monstrous, so disfigur'd,
That nature stands aghast;
And the fair light which gilds this new made orb,
Shorn of his beams, shrinks in. Dryden.
Love is a plant of the most tender kind,
That shrinks and shakes with ev'ry ruffling wind. Grav.
All fibres have a contractile power, whereby they shorten; as appears if a fibre be cut transversely, the ends shrink, and make the wound gape. Arbutnot.
Philosophy that touch'd the heav'ns before,
Shrinks to her hidden cause, and is no more. Pope.
3. To express fear, horror, or pain, by shuddering, or contracting the body.
There is no particular object so good, but it may have the shew of some difficulty or unpleasant quality annexed to it, in respect whereof the will may shrink and decline it. Hooker.
The morning cock crew loud,
And at the found it shrank in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
